

If Ever I Fall (Rhode Island Romance Book 1)

Listen to me, Willa Cochrane. Don't ever change who you are for someone else. There's a man out there for you who will understand that love isn't about changing someone, even if he thinks it's for your own good. Real love is about finding someone who's already the perfect fit. For the first time in her life, Willa is free to do as she pleases. No longer under the control of her domineering father, she seeks solitude in the Rhode Island house bequeathed to her by her aunt. But her newfound peace is disrupted when her well-meaning friends enter her name in a raffle for a total home makeover, and Willa wins. Socially awkward by nature, Willa balks when she learns that the remodel will be featured as an episode for a new television reality series starring two brothers, local general contractors, Joe and Tony Rossetti. Determined to honor her aunt's memory, she eventually agrees to move forward with the project. When she opens her front door to the brothers on the first day of shooting, she will soon discover that she has opened the door to a man who could fulfill all the yearnings of her secret heart.
